

Hot Chocolate Dash!

Number Recognition Game

Instructions for Play - Hot Chocolate Dash:

Print out hot cocoa cups on cardstock and laminate or mount on colored scrapbook or construction paper. Or, just print and laminate and you are set to go!

Place the cards for the skill that you would like to focus on in a large mug or basket. For example, you can print more of the teen numbers if you would like to focus more on that skill.

Invite your students to sit in a circle. Pass the cup to the first child, he/she says the number. If the child is correct the card can go in the middle. I like to put them in the middle so no child feels left out if he/she doesn't have any cards in front of him/her.

If the child can not read the word, they can ask a friend for help or put it back in the cup.

If the marshmallow card is pulled out, the class says, "Yum, yum in my cup!" Now, if you are feeling especially adventurous... .. Have hot chocolate ready at each child's table/desk, and they can go take a drink of their hot chocolate! Or, you could give each child a marshmallow to eat. Depends on the day, right?! Put all the cards back in the cup, and begin again!

2 other options for play:

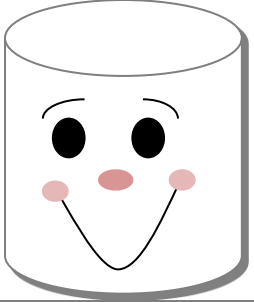

Print multiple copies so the children can play "Memory" - for example, match up the teen numbers to the corresponding 10 frames.

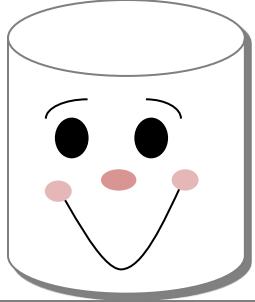

Play the "Missing Marshmallow Game" - hide the marshmallow clip art behind one of the number cards in a pocket chart. The children take turns calling a number and come up to see if the marshmallow is behind it. Play continues until the marshmallow is found!
